Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

THERE is no sound business reason why Hope hasn't completed her Federal Savings & Loan association unit. But there will be plenty of business regret if our community, through sheer lack of interest, fails to organize on this third call of the Federal Home Loan Bank.

Ex-U.S. Prosecutor Ivie, of Western Arkansas, Indicted

Gurly and Wilson, Former Prohi Agents, Reindicted at Texarkana

ACCEPTED PAYMENT Federal Men Charged With Taking Bribes in Liquor Cases

TEXARKANA — Former United States District Attorney W. N. Ivie and two former prohibition officials were indicted by the Arkansas federal grand jury here Thursday on charges in connection with the acceptance of money from defendants in various liquor cases pending at the last November term.

S. M. Gurley, former deputy prohibition administrator for the western district, and Owen R. Wilson, former prohibition agent, were re-indicted. Previous indictments against them had been quashed on a demurrer for failing to state an offense.

Retire in January Ivie, whose term expired in January, and who was succeeded February 10 by Clinton R. Barry of Fort Smith, was also indicted on a charge of concealing or destroying the grand jury book used in the November indictment.

The indictments were based on a chain of circumstances pyramided on the alleged payment of small sums of money by a half dozen liquor case defendants from Miller and Nevada counties. It was charged that Wilson was a witness in most of the cases, and that he received the money in these cases, aided and abetted by his former superior, Gurley, with the understanding his testimony would be influenced thereby.

Gurley was alleged to have received $25 from George Bassett, Miller county hotelkeeper.

The district attorney was alleged to have conspired with them to take the necessary action to obtain dismissals or clemency for each of the defendants. He and the others were named jointly in the conspiracy indictment, which was predicated partly on a statute dealing with bribery of government officials.

It was not clear whether efforts would be made to show in this connection that Gurley and Wilson, though not on active duty, were officers in the sense that they were civil service employees "on furlough," and were still retained on the civil service lists for possible re-employment.

Same Grand Jury
The former district attorney was indicted by the same grand jury which investigated the case in the fall. It was called back at a special civil term just concluded for the primary purpose of reopening the investigation. District Attorney Burke, aided by Assistant Attorney Duke Frederick of Menn, took charge of the case before the jury.

Mr. Ivie had refused to sign the original indictments, pointing out that the facts cited did not allege an offense against the government, and predicting they would not stand up.

The sensation broke when Gurley, who said he was merely acting as an attorney for the men in question, was arrested in the district attorney's office, otherwise unoccupied at the time, by United States Marshal Cooper Hudspeh, acting, it is reported, under direct order from Federal Judge Heartill Ragon to go to the bottom of rumors current in the halls of the federal building at that time.

On Gurley's person, after a brief struggle, was found $25 in marked currency which Marshal Hudspeh furnished to Bassett, who claimed he had already had negotiations with Gurley. Bassett had already pleaded guilty to the charges of selling and possessing whisky and maintaining a nuisance on which he had been indicted, and said he was making an effort to be placed on probation.

Allegations that Wilson was a witness in most of the cases in question threw a light on the matter that had not previously appeared. At the time the first indictments were returned it was said he was witness in only one case.

The conspiracy indictment contained six counts. The first alleged that on November 3 the three defendants conspired to accept money from Artie Clark, of Nevada county, indicted for removing 20 gallons of whisky; that on November 13 Wilson, aided and abetted by Gurley, asked for an accepted $20 bribe in Nevada county; and that on November 15, the district attorney attempted to nolle prosequi the Clark case.

Army-Mail, Tariff Bring House Fight

Republicans Seek to Score on Eight Mail-Line Deaths

But Democratic House Leaders Put Muffer on G. O. P. Attack

VETO IS EXPECTED House and Senate Have Torn Up Economy Bill—Roosevelt to Strike

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Quick adjournment of the house Friday was blocked by a prospective Republican attack on the Army's flying of the mail.

"Another Army flier has just been killed," said Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, seeking consideration of a resolution for discontinuance of this Army task.

Speaker Rainey would not recognize her, and soon thereafter Majority Leader Byrns obtained an adjournment.

Byrns expressed the view that the house in its present mood would be unable to agree upon a compromise on veterans' legislation acceptable to the president; but both he and Rainey agreed that the house would not override a presidential veto.

Charged with aiding John Dillinger to escape Crown Point, Ind., jail, Sam Cahoon, 64, above, turnkey, is alleged to have violated rules by not ordering prisoners into cells before he entered the corridor.

Sought by police in the John Dillinger escape investigation, Mayor Bogert, above, is said to have visited the outfall in his Crown Point jail cell before Dillinger's flight.

U. S. Savings-Loan Drive Under Way

Hope Has 19 Subscribers, Must Show Total of 30—Conway Here

Hope investors are being given another chance this week and next to complete the organization of a local Federal Savings & Loan association, of which 19 have already been organized in Arkansas. J. Curran Conway of the Federal Home Loan Bank, told the Rotary club Friday noon in Hotel Barlow.

The Little Rock organizer, who has made two previous trips here, reported that the Hope group is about two-thirds complete.

Nineteen subscribers have been obtained, while 30 are required; and 160 shares of stock have been pledged, while 250 are required.

Nashville, half the size of Hope, obtained 45 subscribers in two days, Mr. Conway said.

The Federal Savings and Loan association, administered through the branch Home Loan Banks all over America, are a federally supervised monopoly of the old building & loan business, and cover a field of banking from which the commercial banks are barred in the future.

The Rev. Wallace R. Rogers, pastor of First Baptist church, appeared on a program presented by Robert Morris.

Speaking on "Investments," the Rev. Mr. Rogers said:

"The best is an investment of genuine service.

"I realize that the way some people practice it, professional charity work with publicity accompanying it brings them a happiness which is their reward.

"But genuine service enables a man to stand on his own feet."

Referring to the service of church membership, the minister recalled a certain woman who when asked to join the church said she doubted its value, inasmuch as her children already had the example of good parents.

"All of which in this case was very true," continued Mr. Rogers, "and yet of status of the obligations and relations."

Hope Advances in State Tournament

Bobcats Defeat Brinkley and Go Into Quarter-Finals

HARRISON, Ark.—(AP)—Hope High School advanced to the quarter-finals in the annual state basketball tournament Friday morning by defeating Brinkley High School, 47 to 36.

The victory Friday morning is the second quintet Coach Teddy Jones' men have eliminated from the tournament. In the opening game Thursday night the Bobcats defeated Pea Ridge High School, 30 to 23.

The contest was exciting. The outcome was in doubt until the final three minutes of play when the Bobcats forged ahead to win by a safe margin.

Results of other games played Thursday night:

Little Rock High School had an easy time beating Omaha, 36 to 15.

Old High School won a close game from Okolona, 19 to 14.

Vilonia forfeited to Pine Bluff, the latter defending champions of the state.

Warren, scheduled to play Hot Springs Friday morning, notified officials Thursday night that the team would not take part and the game was forfeited to the Trojans, 2 to 0.

Tariff Action Would Do Away With Crop Reduction--Wallace

Secretary of Agriculture Pleads for Granting of Tariff-Trading Powers to President Roosevelt

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Secretary Wallace told the house ways and means committee Thursday it would be a "practicable impossibility" for Congress to handle tariff negotiations in the "delicate way" necessary under the administration's proposal for reciprocal trade agreements.

This view, expressed in urging early enactment of the measure giving President Roosevelt power to negotiate tariff pacts, struck fire from the Republican committee members.

"We've been doing it for 100 years," Representative Bachrach of New Jersey told him. "I do say that's a pretty hard statement that Congress can't handle it."

"This," said Wallace, "is a different situation from those lovely days."

Wallace said it was "exceedingly desirable that foreign purchasing power for our agricultural surpluses be restored." To restore this purchasing power and thereby to increase the market for American farm produce ex-

Spiritual Value in Marriage Makes Home Permanent

Dr. J. M. Williams Closing Nightly Lectures Here Friday

ANCIENT CUSTOMS Hope Speaker Cautions Against Marriage as Reform Agency

Another great audience assembled at First Methodist church Thursday night to hear Dr. J. M. Williams give the fourth of his evening messages on "The Christian Home."

The theme of the address was "Marriage, a Holy Estate." He read the words of Christ on marriage, and then commented on how little attention the Protestant church had given in its Sunday school lessons to this teaching.

Speaking of the marriage ceremony as a great religious experience, he commented on the attitude of the people who come to that ceremony in the spirit of the young man who said to a minister, "I want to get married, and make it snappy."

Greeks and Romans
He then spoke of having made a study of the marriage ceremonies both of the old Greeks and Romans and of all the Christian churches. The first act of a Greek bridegroom on entering his new home was to set up an altar of worship to the gods. It was also, he said, a custom of the Romans to first perform in the new home an act of dedication to the Roman gods. And in the Christian church every branch has preserved in its rituals and customs the thought of marriage as a divine union of two persons.

He spoke also of the wide-spread acceptance of the plan of trial marriage and of how far that is from the true idea of marriage. It is irreligious, and is socially dangerous. Marriage is not a trial union of two people. It is rather a union of two people in holy bonds, wherein the completion of the lives of two persons is, under God, perfected. In that estate two persons in joy and in sorrow, in prosperity and adversity share one another's life "until death," and in that sharing each becomes richer.

"Reforming" Dangerous

Pleading for a saner approach to marriage he spoke against the strain of social events that often bring a young couple to the altar worn and weary and unable to appreciate the high significance of the ceremony.

And he also warned a girl against the idea of marrying a man to reform him. "Let him reform first, for it is a rather dangerous procedure to give one's youth in the hazardous enterprise of trying to make a prince of a pig."

In one high climax of the address Dr. Williams emphasized the importance of religion in married life. He said, "You can not have a great and successful married life if you leave God out of it."

Friday night Dr. Williams concludes the series of addresses with his lecture on "The School, The Home, The Church." In this last appearance before the people of Hope Dr. Williams will deal with the practical relation between these three great institutions on which rests present civilization.

Ancient Capital of Sheba's Queen Found by French Explorers

PARIS, France—(AP)—Captain Cornillon Moliner and Andre Malraux telegraphed from French Somaliland Thursday night that they had found the lost capital of the Queen of Sheba.

100 More Dropped, CWA Cuts to 390

County Roads, City Water Mains Are Being Pushed to Completion

Another 100 employees were dropped from the CWA rolls in Hempstead county Thursday—the fourth step in the demobilizing of the CWA here.

The new quota of workers will be 390, including all project employees, federal, state and local.

This curtailment will bring the payroll below $2,000 weekly, Joe R. Floyd, disbursing officer, said Friday.

Work is being pushed on construction of county roads and the extension of the city's water mains—considered the two most desirable projects.

Seven canning units are still in operation under the direction of Mrs. J. L. Jamison, new county supervisor. These units operate two days each week, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Mrs. Jamison urged that housewives take advantage of the opportunity of having pork and beef canned before products from vegetable gardens come in.

The government furnishes cans and the supervisor, and only takes a toll of one out of every five cans. Locations and supervisors of the seven units:

He was shot with a revolver and died 45 minutes later.

Muto's steward also was killed by the assassin. Muto's paper has been revealing scandals involving industrialists and politicians regarding the disposal of stocks held by the Taiwan (Formosa) bank.

The assassin, one Shinkichi of Tokio, committed suicide.

Muto was a son of the late Kunishida Sanjuma, a member of the Parliament, and later was adopted by Matsunomoto Muto. He was graduated from Keio University in 1884 and went to America as correspondent for the Japanese Gazette. He was appointed assistant manager of the Kobe branch of the great Hsuibank, then entered the Kanegafuchi company, rising to the presidency which he held until 1930, then continuing as an adviser.

Muto had been president of the Jiji Shimpo since 1932. The paper has been the fourth largest in the capital having a circulation of over 400,000. Muto was sent to the Japanese diet three times since 1924. He was president of the Jitsugo Doshikai party.

Blizzard Accounts for One—Motor Failure Takes the Other

By the Associated Press
Two Army mail fliers fell to their death Friday, one in an Ohio snow squall, and the other in sunny Florida.

The latest fatalities bring to eight the number of Army fliers who have lost their lives since the Army was assigned the task of flying the mails a month ago.

All of the victims were flying mail, or were assigned to that task.

In an early morning flight from Newark, N. J., to Cleveland, Lieut. Otto Wienecke crashed to his death in a snow storm at Chardon, Ohio, early in the morning.

In the crash of an Army airmail bomber soon after it had taken off for southern Florida from Daytona Beach Friday forenoon Private Ernest B. Bell was killed and two others injured.

The latter crash was attributed to a motor failure.

Legal Document Is 131 Years Old

J. M. Campbell Has Paper That Was Executed in 1803

A legal document, dated 131 years ago, concerning a tract of land in Camden county, Georgia, is among the possessions of J. M. Campbell of this city.

Hand-woven paper was used for the wording, which is in print. The document is well preserved, the handwriting and printed words being legible.

Many of the words contained the letter "s" used in place of what is now known as the letter "ss." For example the word "shall" was spelled "shall."

Mr. Campbell discovered the aged legal form among some of the possessions handed down to him by his father, James H. Campbell.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN Washington

Old Wilson Crowd Handles Helm in D. C. Politics . . . Capital Women Go Strong for Flying . . . Barkley Comes Natural to Black . . . Alice Says She's 50, Fat, and Flighty.

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Washington Correspondent
WASHINGTON.—Local politics in the voteless District of Columbia gives the old Wilson crowd something to play with.

The most important fingers in the District patronage pie since Democrats recaptured the federal government have been those of Dr. Cary Grayson, Woodrow Wilson's physician, Joe Tumulty, Wilson secretary, and Mrs. J. Edgar Hoover, one of the most powerful of the Wilson crowd.

Grayson, a leader in the Virginia society-hunting crowd, who has been intimate with Roosevelt for 20 years and was chairman of the inaugural committee, has the most influence.

He named at least two of the three commissioners who govern the capital's local affairs. He has been mentioned as the next secretary of the navy.

Tumulty recently led a successful fight to oust Corporation Counsel William W. Bridge, charging Bridge had turned Republican and then Democrat again to hold his job.

Bridge's friends, insisting the official had given the Democrats $100,000, while contributing only $100 to the Hoover campaign, declared Tumulty, as lobbyist for the National Distillers' Association, had attacked Bridge because he had blocked distillers from owning interest in local retail liquor stores.

Mrs. Harriman, D. C. national committeewoman and famous for her Sunday night parties starring Democratic lions, plays with Grayson.

She calls Roosevelt "Frank" and he calls her "Daisy," but she once was for Al Smith and hasn't yet got the federal job she probably will get sooner or later.

"Machine" politicians complain bitterly of "carpet-bag" and "special lobby" rule. National Committeewoman John Castello, foe of Mrs. Harriman, has gone plumpless, through "Central State Chairman" John Colpoys has been made a U. S. marshal.

The local Democratic organization is inconsequential except as it sends four delegates to national conventions, concerns itself with local jobs, and stirs up the mail vote among federal employees at election time.

Women Take to Air
Mrs. Roosevelt, who soon will fly to Puerto Rico, isn't the only air travel fan among administration women. Mrs. Harold Ickes flies to and from her job in the Illinois legislature.

Mrs. Henry Morgenthau flies to New York two or three times a month when the weather is warm.

A Dog-Calling Senator
Senator Hugo Black, accused of barking at Walter Brown during the air mail hearings, said he had developed his voice while dog-calling in the Alabama woods.

Jim Farley, who said he didn't call Black a "publicity hound," and Brown, who said he did, were both under oath at the time.

"Now I'm 50, fat, flighty, and fumbling," gaily announced Alice Longworth to some friends as she admitted her recent birthday. First girl in Washington to smoke a cigarette publicly, Alice today uses a denicotized brand.

When a New York broker said on the witness stand that he didn't know how to define a stock market pool, Counsel Ferdinand Pecora assured him it was a "place where the public is drowned."

Correspondent: "How many men will public works employ by May first?"

Secretary Ickes: "Maybe I made one or two guesses the first day I was administrator, but not since then. I learned my lesson."

A letter received at the White House wants to know how to borrow $300 from federal funds to start a restaurant and whether to call it the "New Deal Cafe" or the "Eleanor Roosevelt Beer and Coffee Shoppe."

Seth Thomas, solicitor for the Department of Agriculture, is no relative of the fellow whose name appears on all those old clocks.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Find Energy Outlets for Strong-Willed Child—Such a Boy Needs More Guidance Than Discipline

One of the greatest problems confronting parents today is how to handle the forceful, dominant child without stifling his self-expression. Olive Roberts Barton tells of this vital problem in another of her articles on Child Training.

Every child on earth works a racket. To explain this it is again necessary to go back to beginnings.

Hereditarily must be mentioned. It has nothing to do with a gangster's son being a gangster. It deals with Old Lady Nature, herself.

She says, "I can do better with these human offspring of mine if I treat them as I do my other animals in the beginning. They shall inherit the same general characteristics of their species. That means that calves of all time have had the characteristics of cows, kittens of cats, and so on. There are Jersey cows and Guernsey and Alderneys, therefore their offspring will have the general characteristics of their parents. The kittens of Angora cats will be Angoras." And so we have racial characteristics.

Factor of Heredity
Just how far this heredity goes in the individual has not been settled. There are many of the learned who turn from the word with utter contempt. Again there are those more inclined to lend an ear and concede that some inclinations are directly inherited.

As it happens, the analogy between human beings and animals can be carried only so far. The human has a mind that probably outclasses the sum total of all other animal minds put together.

One thing has been about proved, class to about the same things. No two children are alike. This is more noticeable after the sixth year, but even before that any mother can tell us the truth.

But Mother Nature has another trick up her sleeve. It is right in the trade that the baby makes his choice of how he can best beat the game. Poor little soul, he doesn't know it, but he's either going to find it easier to get the most out of life by appealing little graces, or by more or less bulldozing his way as he goes. A few "behaviorists" refute this and insist that all children can be "conditioned" alike. This theory has fewer supporters than formerly.

Be that as it may, there are two major classes of people in the world, those who find mental content and happiness in subordinating their wills to others, and those who will never be satisfied unless they can control even and people about them. This choice is made so early in life it is difficult to tell when it begins.

"Good" vs. "Bad"
There is no difference from a "good" and "bad" standpoint. It does make all the difference in the world about "behavior," however. As a rule children are a normal mixture, and so are adults, but in a large number the characteristics are pure either one way or the other.

The little chap who decides that he can manage life better by being dominant is going to have a tough time of it. He will probably find that every where he turns this "force" of his will be beaten down, for we love to discipline rather than guide. Being active he will be experimental and "try anything once." And that means trouble. He will be called a bad boy.

His parents will very probably try to curb and control him rather than find him energy outlets. His impulses can be turned to enormous good, but if misdirected and frustrated, this is a terrible thing to let loose on a world because impulses turned back on themselves become the extremes of maturity. It is this strong-willed child who is one of our greatest problems. He needs an understanding heart if ever any one did.

The ROMANTIC RUNAWAY

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Pablito knows nothing of his parents—a titled Englishman and a servant girl. As a child he ran away from ANGELA, the beautiful old nurse to whom care he was left. Since then he has lived with KARRIS NOYES, wanted by police for a murder years before.

TED JEFFRIES, a guest at the Field home, sees Noyes and recognizes him. Pablito tells Noyes to hide in the swamp and promises to meet him there.

In the swamp Noyes hears a man and girl making plans to rob the Field home during the moon-quad night next evening. Without telling Noyes, Pablito has determined to go to the party in order to talk to Estelle. He assumes a costume.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER VIII

PABLITO found Noyes where they had agreed to meet in a part of the swamp near an open stretch.

"It's all right," he said, seeing the shadow that was Noyes.

"You're sure?" the other asked in an undertone.

"Yes. I've been to the camp and to Bantam's. Nobody's been talking in either place. I've been thinking Jeffries may not have recognized you."

"He knew me all right. I saw it in his eyes."

"But you were facing the sun."

"Just the same he knew me."

"Well, any way, it's all right." Pablito stooped and nudged Noyes' canoe. When he raised his head he saw the faint glow of the fire farther in the swamp.

"Someone here?" he asked.

"Yes. I'll tell you what it later. I don't know what to do about what I overheard. But let's get started."

"All right. Ready?"

"Yes."

Pablito gave the canoe a shove and led it to the end of his boat. He made it fast to the second boat, got in and headed home. He whistled on the way. He was relieved because Noyes was safe and because he had his costume. Perhaps on the following night he would talk to Estelle.

When they reached the island he tied up both boats and followed Noyes into the shack. Looking over the older man's head he saw Jack, one of the servants at the camp.

Pablito gave the canoe a shove.

a change of expression. He thought quickly. There would be a boat for Havana in the morning. If Noyes could get on everything would be all right. If Noyes went down to the dock at once he might be able to steal aboard. Once on the boat it would be quite simple.

He heard himself thanking Jack and a moment later saw him slip off. Then he came back to the shack and outlined his plan to Noyes.

"I'll join you as soon as I can," Pablito promised. "We'll meet at that hotel called 'La Mirasol.' I've heard Kerry at the camp speak of it often. You'll have to get on board tonight without anyone seeing you. Take plenty of money and you can tip any of the crew if they find you. Get one of them to help you through the custom house, too, so the officials won't see you. I have enough I think."

He gave Noyes $100; he had $15 left.

Noyes packed a few things in an old bag; then Pablito poked him to the mainland. They said farewell hastily. Pablito watched Noyes up the track until he was out of sight, then went back to the shack—alone. For a few moments he sat on Noyes' cot, touching Noyes' pillow. Then, because he feared to indulge an unmanly display even while alone, he arose and opened the package containing the treader costume.

Noyes, about that time, realized he had not told Pablito what he had heard in the swamp. He decided it did not matter much. Pablito never went to Field's camp after the fall of dusk.

At the docks he paused. He would have just one drink, he decided, before he sneaked aboard. One drink—or two, perhaps—would steady him. He did not go to Bantam's but turned into a more obscure place where he was not well known. Here he sat down and ordered a bottle of rum.

In a few minutes an unshaven man who had once been white arose from where he had been sitting watching Noyes. He settled by the newcomer; he had seen Noyes' roll of bills.

"Have one on me," the man invited.

Noyes accepted but kept his eyes on a clock on the wall. In a few moments he would go down to the docks to board the boat without anyone seeing him.

THE camp on the night of the party was a gorgeous place. Ornate torches here and there gave off wavering flames which made the palms cast long, black, uncertain shadows. Rugs were spread with cushions. The boats were masquerading as gondolas. A New York florist had produced a rose garden and Princess, also of New York, had provided unguis of food and drink. Two orchestras had come from the north to provide music for the affair.

Field could see that Estelle, wide-

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

There's much talk in fashion circles about variations of the sailor and other spring bonnets that cover only one small pet on the right side of your head. So let's have a beauty talk about coiffures to wear with these little wisps of straw and felt.

Hair is shorter this season. Bobbed locks are clipped quite high on the neck and long coiffures are arranged up on the back of the head instead of in low, flat buns on the neck.

The next important consideration is curls. You're going to see more and more of them as Easter approaches. Little round flat curls vie with wide waves and combinations of both are chic.

Today we concentrate on a coiffure for shoulder-length hair which emphasizes the two important points already mentioned. The hair is parted high on the right side and the back is rolled and pinned, not straight across the back of the head but vertically from nape of neck to crown of head. The roll is soft and fastened with invisible pins.

There is one wide wave on the left side and a very small one on the right. From the wave downward on both sides the hair is arranged in tiny curls that are also pinned securely.

This is very flattering with a diminutive hat that shows practically the entire head and also very good for evening when one wears an Alice in Wonderland bandeau of tortoise shell studded with three large pearls.

eyed with wonder, was excited by these preparations.

"I think, my dear," he said, "that this will be rather a nice party."

It was at the end of the afternoon and he and the girl were moored by the dock in the boat Pablito had run for them.

Estelle looked toward the land. There had been changes even during the hour they had spent on the water. There was a big tent with a colorful Venetian awning spiked to the ground by tall poles with gilded tops, and a forest of evergreens had suddenly sprung up.

If only, she thought, she could wander this fairland with someone like the young man who ran her father's boats so efficiently. She turned her delicate, oval face toward Pablito.

"It could not help but be a very wonderful party," she said and for the first time her voice was a little vague.

Field stepped from the boat to help her out. Pablito, one strong, tanned hand on the dock and the other on the edge of the boat, looked up at her.

"It was a fine run, Pablito," she said.

"Thank you, Miss Estelle."

"Will you be working here tonight?" she questioned.

"No, Miss Estelle."

"I'm sorry. It will be beautiful with all the colored lights. I think you might like to see it."

"Thank you," he said again. Then he watched her make her way up the long, water-blackened dock toward the land.

Field left her as she set foot upon the bench and returned to Pablito. "Smith," he said, "I want a little talk with you some time. Shall we say tomorrow morning at 11?"

"At any time that suits you, sir."

"Very well. Then I'll expect you at that hour in my office."

"Yes, sir."

"I want to do something that will be rather good for you, Smith."

"Thank you, sir."

Alone, Pablito wondered why his employer should want to talk with him. He doubted Field's intentions. He had heard of his being "good" to men before and knew that this usually meant shaping men or warping them so that they would fit some use of the rich man's and be fit for nothing more.

No doubt, Pablito decided, Jeffries had told of having seen Noyes. He must have spoken of it to Field and now Field was planning to use this information for his own purposes. He would try to make a tool of the one who was shielding Noyes. Well, Pablito reflected, Noyes was in Cuba by this time. He drew a breath, the depths of which was made by relief.

Looking inland he saw Estelle standing before the tent that had been set up while they were on the water. He hoped fervently that Field would curb those natural instincts of his which had been displayed so fully at other camp parties. Doubtless he would. It seemed so deeply devoted to this daughter who in no way resembled her father.

30 Days That Rocked the Nation

Reviewing the Crash—One Year After

President Roosevelt signs his first bill—the bill giving him extraordinary banking powers, which was rushed through Congress on its first day.

Twenty-fourth Day—March 9

The 73rd Congress, summoned on four days' notice met in an atmosphere of solemnity and gravity that had not been seen in the Capitol since war days. In the House gallery, knitting, sat Mrs. Roosevelt.

Immediately after convening, the administration's bank bill was put before the house, so hastily prepared that copies had not even been printed. Members knew what the bill contained only insofar as they heard the clerk read it from a single copy scribbled with pencilled corrections.

In just 38 minutes the house passed the bill, unanimously, and a half hour later it was before the senate. Here there was some short debate, but the senate, too, passed the bill promptly, 73-7.

In less than eight hours after it had convened, the 73rd Congress had passed the key bill giving the president dictatorial powers over impounding of gold, issuing of currency, credit transactions and foreign exchange.

A few sighed with regret to see Congress "abdicate" its powers; but many more sighed with relief at positive proof that a representative assembly really could act quickly and positively in an emergency.

Shortly after dinner, President Roosevelt received the bill, and at 8:25 he signed it with a borrowed fountain pen. The New Deal was on its way.

Another $30,000,000 of hoarded gold was turned in to Federal Reserve authorities in New York. $65,000,000 for the week.

Do you like to see broad vistas spreading out before your view. When you're standing on a hilltop, when the day is young and new? Do you like to catch the vision of God's presence everywhere, As you stand upon a hilltop, when your heart's in morning prayer? If you find your thought is narrow, that you're limited and bound, That you're circumscribed in thinking, just remember it's been found.

That it's best to see broad vistas, for in them you're sure to find Tolerance and sweet compassion that abide in breadth of mind.

Kroger's Business Gains 12 Per cent

February Sales Are $16,686,000 Against $14,844,000 Year Ago

CINCINNATI, Ohio—Sales at Kroger stores spurted to new heights for the second period of the year ending February 24th, the figures showing a 12 per cent increase over the same month a year ago.

With the announcement of the big business increase, Albert H. Morrill, president of the Kroger Grocery & Baking Co., declared:

"The improvement is more than seasonal and there is every evidence that it is substantial and will be permanent despite setbacks which may appear."

Total sales of the company for the second period of 1934 were $16,686,477, compared to $14,844,670 for the same period the previous year, representing increased business amounting to $1,841,807.

The increase from the company's various branches ranged from 5 to 13 per cent, indicating that business of the company is picking up briskly in all sections, and that the increases are not confined to any particular spots where seasonal industrial activity may have been an influence, it was pointed out at the general offices of the company here.

During the first period of the year, which ended last January 27th, a 5 per cent increase was noted over the same period of 1933. The 1934 total for this period amounted to $15,397,725, compared to $14,528,143 for the identical period of the previous year, an increase of $869,582.

The cumulative sales for the two periods of 1934 total $32,084,202, compared to $29,372,813 for the same two periods of 1933, representing an increase of $2,611,389, or a jump of nine per cent.

TARIFF ACTION

Secretary Hull, had discussed for two hours the administration's views. Republicans challenged Hull on the point of the most-favored-nation treaties this country holds with other nations, under which trade benefits granted one country must be extended to others.

Hull, reflecting the previously expressed attitude of the State Department on this question, explained that when agreements were based on certain products similar tariff concessions would be extended other countries for those specific products if they were produced in those countries.

Hull's testimony produced these ideas:

The Supreme Court would hold the bill valid if it came to a test before that tribunal.

The major objective of the measure was to "reopen the old and seek new outlets for our surplus products."

Virtually every one of the 63 nations had erected trade barriers against the exports of this country through duties, sanitary requirements and other restrictions.

Operation Returns Jackson to Team

Arkansas Star Again in Giants' Lineup—His Knees Are Well

MIAMI BEACH, Fla.—(AP)—The highly dramatic prospect that the youthful hero of the New York Giants' 1933 championship dash, Blondy Ryan, will have to yield the regular shortstop job this season to the sensational comeback of Travis Jackson of Arkansas, team captain, has the training camp agog and drew from Manager Bill Terry Thursday the first definite statement on the subject.

"I won't bind myself to any hard and fast decision," declared the boss of the world champions, but right now Jackson has the shortstop job and I don't see how he can be kept out of there, barring another accident to his knees.

If Jackson recovers his old-time fielding form after nearly two seasons on the bench it will be one of the most remarkable comebacks in baseball history. Despite an operation for the removal of a bone from one knee and a piece of cartilage from another after the 1932 season, he was considered "through."

Since the double operation, performed by a Memphis specialist, "Stoney's" recovery has been slow. He failed to do much last year until called on to replace Vorgez at third in the world series. He came through in such good style that it was figured he would be a candidate for third this spring, rather than a replacement for Ryan, the spark plug and most colorful individual on the team.

"I'm not sure whether my legs can stand up for a full season," said Jackson, echoing Terry's caution, "but they feel now like new and I'm finding no trouble going to either side. Shortstop is my position and that's what I hope to play."

Frozen Deposits Affect Income Tax

Charge-Off Limited to Amount Liquidator Estimates as Lost

With every available person in the Internal Revenue Service now at the disposal of the taxpayers to aid in the preparation of their income tax returns which must be filed not later than midnight of March 15, several questions seem to be causing the most trouble to taxpayers, said Commissioner Guy T. Helvering here today.

One of those questions is whether or not an account in a closed bank may be deducted from their income. Commissioner Helvering pointed out that such accounts are to be treated in the same manner as had debts. When a bank is in charge of a conservator for the purpose of reorganization, and is being liquidated, no determination can be made with respect to the worthlessness of the deposit, Commissioner Helvering stated. When a statement is issued from a bank in process of liquidation, indicating the approximate per cent of the deposits to be paid, the depositor will be allowed a deduction of the amount of his deposit in excess of the amount to be received by him on final distribution. However, if a depositor later receives more than the amount indicated at the time he filed his return, the additional amount should be reported by the taxpayer for the year in which such distribution is received.

In the case of stockholders, the regulations stipulate that if a stock becomes worthless, the cost may be deducted by the taxpayer for that year provided a satisfactory showing of its worthlessness is made. The amount paid by stockholders because of their additional liability, to the extent of any portion thereof determined to be necessary to pay the creditors, may also be deducted as a loss for the year in which such determination is made, however, any portion of an additional assessment paid by the stockholder in order to assist in the reorganization of a bank may not be deducted by the taxpayer, but must be capitalized as additional cost of the stock.

Swiss Will Try for Post Record

Standard Oil Backing Attempt on World Flight Mark

An attempt to break the round-the-world flight record held by Wiley Post will be made shortly by two Swiss military pilots, Lieutenants Paul Scherer and Albert Jucker, according to Major E. E. Aldrin, head of the aviation company of New Jersey, which is making arrangements to provide supplies and service along the course of the proposed flight.

The Swiss pilots are at present engaged in a training program which includes distance, over-water and night flights from Switzerland through Europe to Russia, Ireland and Africa. Their contemplated flight will start from Zurich as soon as the series of training flights is completed and will follow a course through Russia, Siberia, Alaska, Canada, New York, across the Atlantic to Ireland and thence back to Zurich, a distance in all of 16,000 miles. Post's record on his flight was 4 days 11 hours 34 1/2 minutes flying time and 7 days, 18 hours, 49 1/2 minutes elapsed time.

The Swiss fliers will use a two place low wing Northrop Gamma monoplane, equipped with a Wright Cyclone 625 horse power engine. Their plane will be equipped with a Sperry automatic robot pilot and complete blind flying instruments.

Betty Furness, an heiress, forsook the luxurious background of society life on New York's exclusive Park Avenue to shine in Hollywood.

Edward Sangers, garageman, who was taken with a deputy sheriff, for protection by John Dillinger in his flight from the Crown Point jail, on March 3. Sangers was released near Kankakee, Ill., an hour after the jail break.

The kitchen of the Lake county jail shown in above photo was the point of John Dillinger's break on March 3. The Indiana outlaw, after locking up all the guards in sight, fled through the kitchen, down the street to a garage where he took the sheriff's car to escape.

This "model, escape-proof Lake county jail in Crown Point, Ind., could not hold John Dillinger, the nation's "No. 1 outlaw," who made a daring escape, freeing a negro murderer with him, despite the strong guard posted around the prison, three members of which are shown here. In the background is the bridge over which Dillinger would have been taken to the criminal court building, at right, for his trial, without going into the street.

Sure Sign of Spring—First Flood Arrives

Sought for Quiz On Jail Break

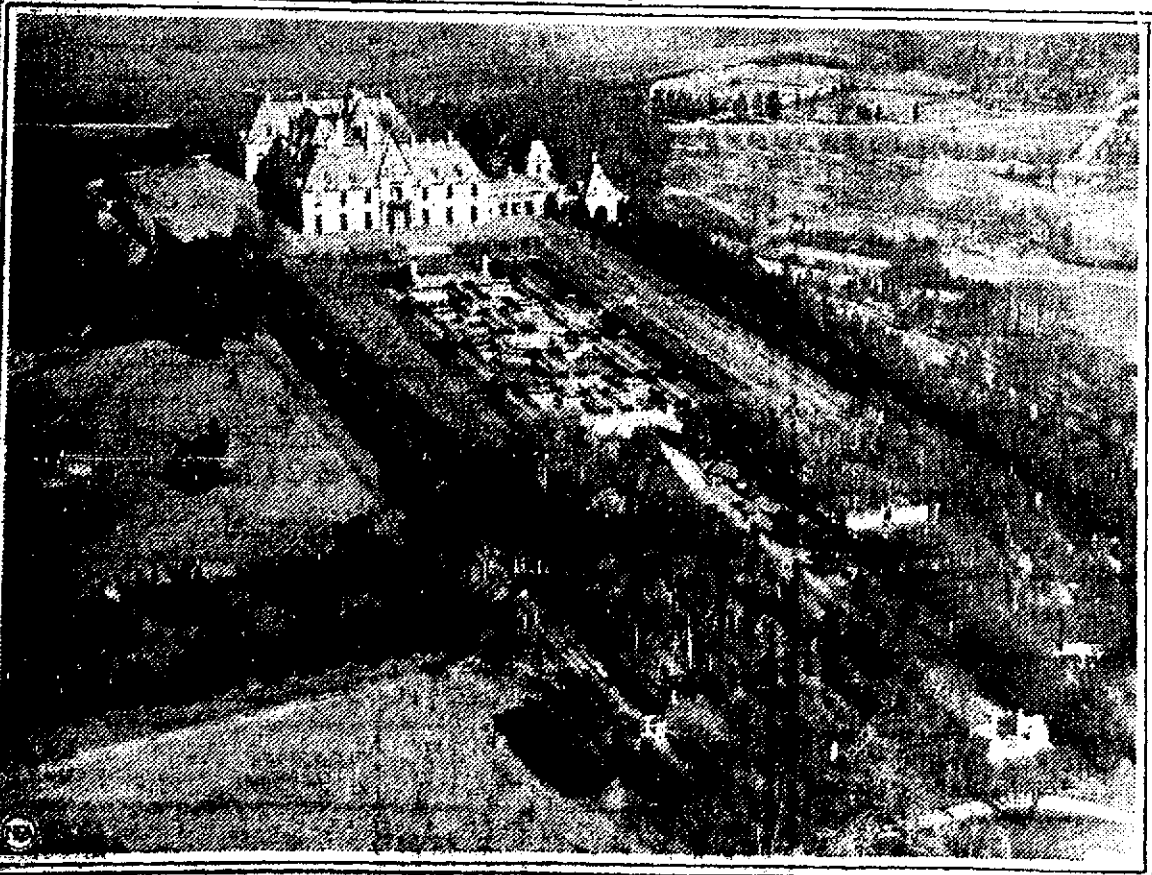

Sought for questioning in the John Dillinger escape, Elaine De Kant Dent Burton, above, is believed to be the woman who paid three visits to the outlaw in his Crown Point, Ind., jail cell. Police believe that plans were made for his escape during these visits.

One of the finest formal gardens in America graces the estate of Otto Kahn, New York banker, shown here in all its symmetrical, stately beauty, photographed from the air. Cinema Beauty Seeks Liberty

Martel's Lean Dogs Best in Quebec Sled Derby

"It takes lean dogs for a long race," and that kind won the International Quebec dogsled derby. Here you see Emilie Martel of Quebec and his team of powerful huskies going strong in the last of the three 40-mile stretches of the 1934 classic. Their total elapsed time was 11 hours 17 minutes and 22 seconds—23 minutes better than the second place winner. At the left is a closeup of Emilie, trying to catch his breath after the final dash down Quebec's Grand Allee.

NEW YORK

By Helen Welshimer

CITIES there have been before,
Bagdad, Trieste, Singapore;
Earth-bound places, all of them,
Nineveh and Bethlehem.
None of them at any time
Fell a sudden urge to climb
Upward in a long parade
Star-hoofed, curious, unafraid!
Twilight on the Queen's Shore shows
How you rise in long, white rows,
And strange wonder seizes the
At your vast immensity!

WHEN I get the midtown slant
On your buildings, though, I grant
That the Empire State detracts
From the Woolworth's high-lit acts,
And I know the RCA
Looms within the Chrysler's way.
Still I marvel men could dream
Such an architectural scheme.
Summertime, all in all,
You make even love seem small!

Parables of the Kingdom

Text: Matt. 13:1-32
The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Sunday, March 11.
By WM. E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of The Congregationalist

The teaching of Jesus was largely in terms of illustration. Much of what he had to proclaim was too high and deep for people to understand, if he had sought to express it to them in language remote from life and daily experience; so he interpreted the high teaching in language and in pictures that his hearers might better understand.

It is true that, even with the simplification of his teaching, those who heard him did not always understand, and they came asking to have the meaning of the parables explained to them. In some instances Jesus gave a detailed explanation, as for instance of the parable of the sower and the seed, and we have this explanation along with the parable.

The advantage of teaching by parables is that those who listen are more likely to retain what they hear, and they always are looking for some deeper and fuller meaning than they have apprehended at first.

We study a parable or a story, told to express or illustrate truth, to discover some meaning that we had not grasped at first, whereas some truth expressed in a plain and matter-of-fact statement would be taken more likely for its matter-of-factness, without concern about its deeper meanings and implications.

We have seen the statement made that the parables of Jesus were understood by everybody. That is not true. Jesus himself complained that his hearers did not grasp his meaning, and he reproached even the disciples with being dull of hearing. Nevertheless, the truth probably sank in more deeply and was more capable of being understood because of the simple story form in which Jesus presented it.

Here, in our lesson, we have six parables, all intended to illustrate the nature of the Kingdom of God, its growth among men and its issues. The first parable is that of the grain of mustard seed, illustrating how the Kingdom of Heaven grows from small beginnings, and reminding us that truth and goodness are not to be judged in terms of quality, but in terms of quantity and life.

Somewhat the same truth is illustrated in the parable of the leaven—a small lump that works slowly and effectively in the many measures of meal until the whole is leavened. The parable of the treasure hidden in the field represents, rather, the attitude of the individual toward the Kingdom and the means of his entrance into it; and the parable of the merchant seeking goodly pearls has the same emphasis upon the fact that only those who are willing to give everything for the possession of the Kingdom really enter into it and find its fullness.

The parable of the net cast into the sea illustrates the progress of the Kingdom in the world and the sifting process that it inevitably occasions as it challenges men for good or for evil. And, finally, the likening of the disciple of the Kingdom of Heaven to a householder emphasizes the richness of the treasures of the Kingdom from which the disciple brings forth things new and old.

Military Training Camps to Be Held

Camp Pike Expected to Operate July 17 to August 15

OMAHA, Neb.—Citizens' Military Training Camps are expected to be held again this year, according to an announcement Friday by Major General Frank R. McCoy, Commanding the Seventh Corps Area. The exact number to be trained has not yet been made public by the War Department in Washington, D. C. General McCoy states, but the tentative plan is to train 4,000 young men in the Seventh Corps Area, which consists of the states of Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri and Arkansas.

The camps will be held from August 1 to August 30 at Fort Crook, Neb.; Fort Des Moines, Iowa; Fort Leavenworth, Kan.; and Fort Snelling, Minn. from July 17 to August 15 at Camp Pike, Ark.; from July 10 to August 8 at Fort Lincoln, N. D.; and Fort Riley, Kan. (the latter for negro candidates only); and from July 2 to July 31 at Jefferson Barracks, Mo.

The object of the C. M. T. camps, General McCoy states, is to develop the manhood of the nation by bringing together young men of high type from all walks of life, in the same uniform, on a common basis of equality, and under the most favorable conditions of outdoor life; to teach them the privileges, duties, and responsibilities of American citizenship; to inculcate self-discipline and obedience; and to develop these young men physically, mentally, and morally.

All applicants are examined physically, and those who meet the requirements are considered for one of the training camps mentioned. Travel expenses to the camps are refunded by paying candidates, upon arrival at camp, the travel allowance of five cents per mile for the distance from their homes to the nearest camp. The same allowance is paid for the return travel the day the candidates leave camp. All necessary expenses at the camp are paid by the government. Food, uniforms, lodging, athletic equipment, laundry service, and medical care are furnished without expense to the candidate.

No obligation for future military service of any kind is incurred by those who attend these camps.

5 Are Indicted in Convicts' "Party"

Fort Smith Grand Jury Acts in Escape of Prisoner Ballard

FORT SMITH, Ark.—(AP)—Earl Decker, Arkansas trusty "lifer," was under indictment Friday on charges of permitting a prisoner to escape as part of an alleged wild party which was staged here several weeks ago by Decker and a group of prisoners committed to him for transfer to the state penitentiary.

Decker's indictment runs the total to five in connection with the Fort Smith affair.

Four Previously Indicted

FORT SMITH, Ark.—(AP)—The Sebastian county grand jury Thursday returned 41 indictments, including four in connection with the escape of B. R. Ballard from a prison trusty guard.

In returning the indictments in the "gloriously drunk" escape of Ballard from Earl Decker, a Tucker prison farm trusty guard, the grand jury clinched a controversy which had raged here since February 5. Ballard was indicted on a charge of escape and Bob East, Bernice Yocum and Gertrude Whitefield, all of Fort Smith, were indicted on charges of permitting a prisoner to escape.

Decker, under a life sentence at Tucker farm, has been charged here with permitting a prisoner under sentence to escape.

The indictments were the result of a drunken party which the indicted persons and Decker attended here, together with two other prisoners who had been turned over to Decker to transfer to prison. During the party, Ballard walked away, to be captured later at Searcy.

5th Committeeman, Jed Adams, Quits

Brooks Hays, NRA Pointee, May Resign in Arkansas

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Postmaster General Farley dug into his files and made public Thursday the resignation of Jed C. Adams, member of the Board of Tax Appeals, as Democratic national committeeman of Texas. The national chairman dictated a cordial letter to Adams accepting the resignation, which was a telegram dated May 10, 1933.

This fifth step in the administration's effort to separate federal officials from political positions followed closely upon the resignations of two other national committee members—Nellie Taylor Ross of Wyoming, director of the mint, and Arthur M. Leff of Nebraska, who established a law office here after March 4, 1933.

Brooks Hays Next?

LITTLE ROCK—No intimation has reached Brooks Hays, since his appointment as NRA labor compliance officer for Arkansas, that the national administration deems his resignation from the Democratic National Committee advisable, he said Thursday.

However, if administration spokesmen should regard his continuing as national committeeman in conflict with the president's position with reference to committee members engaging in government activities, he will tender his resignation in time for candidates for the place to have their names on the ballots in the August primary, he said.

Dispatches from Washington have indicated that the president prefers that National Committee members practicing law before government departments or holding federal appointments there either retire from the committee or refrain from further participation in government affairs.

Metropolitan To Present "Pagliacci"

Martinelli Will Sing Canio, Role "Bequeathed" to Him By Caruso

Told by GIOVANNI MARTINELLI

THE role of Canio in Leoncavallo's tragic opera "Pagliacci" which I am to sing in this Saturday's broadcast by the Metropolitan Opera Association was, so far as the Metropolitan is concerned, in a sense bequeathed to me by the great Caruso. Years ago when I first came to New York I did not know it and had no intention of learning it because it was always Caruso who sang it. But at the request of the management I learned it so as to sing it in the "short" made by the artist and during his life I used to sing it two or three times each season. Since his death, however, I have sung it often than any other part—in fact, so far as my entire career is concerned, I have sung it often than any role except that of Ramones in "Aida."

It may be interesting to recall that the first "short" made by the Metropolitan, in 1928, was of me singing "Ridi, pagliaccio." I have reason to remember it. Warner Brothers wanted me to take the contract on a percentage basis. I thought a bird in hand was worth two in the bush and took a lump sum. That picture has netted, I am told, over a half million dollars and has been shown in every country in the world where there is a silver screen. That is kind of thing which makes an artist very, very sad.

Why Prologue was Written

"Pagliacci" is best translated into English as "Clown." It is the beginning of a story, the beginning of a tragedy—but that fine artist, Victor Maurel, who was chosen as the original Canio, because he wanted his part "fattened," as they say, brought about two changes, one of them very important.

For him, after the opera was finished Leoncavallo wrote the famous Prologue, sung by Canio before the rise of the curtain and as popular with the audience as "Ridi, pagliaccio" is with the tenors, and for him he also pluralized the title.

"Pagliacci" and "Cavalleria Rusticana" have been sung so often on the same program the world over and always with such financial success that they have been christened "The Heavenly Twins" by more than one grateful impresario.

In 1890 Mascagni won with "Cavalleria Rusticana" the Ricordi prize for a one-act opera. Two years later Leoncavallo won a prize from

Giovanni Martinelli as Canio

Leoncavallo's Popular Opera Will Be Broadcast This Saturday

Spying on her he discovers that she is planning to elope that night with Silvio, a wealthy and handsome farmer. He betrays the lovers to Canio who, mad with jealousy, rushes out, but too late to identify his wife's lover. A good "trouper," he must go on with the evening's show which is old-fashioned Italian slap-stick comedy. It is then he sings the famous "Ridi, pagliaccio"—"Laugh, clown, laugh"—which brings the first of the two acts to a close.

The second act is a play within a play. The comedy has the same theme as the actual tragedy. Nedda is playing a faithless wife and Canio a betrayed husband. The drama becomes so realistic that Canio forgets his role and demands of Nedda the name of her lover. While the audience is delighted with the tense passion of what to them is merely a comedy, Canio, forgetting everything in his jealous fury, drives his knife into Nedda's heart. Silvio rushes from the audience to her rescue and Canio kills him also. The curtain falls as the distraught Canio murmurs brokenly, "La commedia è finita"—"The play is ended."

Tibbett to Sing Tonio

While I confess that "Pagliacci" is not my favorite opera, as an opera, the role of Canio is one of the best and most grateful of all those written for a tenor. While it is comparatively short it is difficult. Its demands upon the voice are most exacting and the acting of the part requires the greatest histrionic resources of the artist. Many find "theatrical hokum" in its appeal to the public but that appeal is very real.

The music is attractive. Besides the Prologue and the "Ridi, pagliaccio" there are the effective choruses and Nedda's "Bird Song" and Beppe's off-stage Serenade in the first act. And particularly effective in the second act is the quaint little old-world Gavotte which accompanies the action of the little play. In every sense of the word the opera, musically and dramatically, is "good theatre."

Singing with me in the cast will be Queensa Mario as Nedda; Lawrence Tibbett as Tonio; Alfio Tedesco as Beppe; and George Cehanovsky as Silvio. Vincenzo Bellizzi will be the conductor.
